A Free Republic At Work

CERTAINLY the Democrats will have a hard time picking flaws with Republican objectives in this campaign, or building up the contention that only members of their party should be chosen in order to uphold the war program, in view of the declaration to the people of New York adopted at the meeting of the Republican state committee of that state held at Albany, which selected Saratoga Springs and June 25 and 25 as the date and place for this year's convention to nominate a Republican state ticket.

The declaration, which rings clear, true and without equivocation, is of interest to Western Maryland Republicans, for which reason the full text is here given.

We give our whole-hearted indorsement and adherence to the resolution adopted by the Republican National Committee at Chicago on April 20," the declaration states.

'As Americans we all have the solemn duty to devote our lives, our energies and substance to one purpose-winning the war.

"To that end we pledge our vigorous support to the president of the United States-our elected leader and the commander in chief of our armed forces.

"The approaching election will witness a free republic at work. The two-party system will shine as a symbol against totalitarianism and the fatal one-party system

"We are determined that there shall be no room in the coming campaign for personal or partisan advantage stemming from the war. We place national unity above partisan politics.

"No one party can claim a monopoly on patriotism. We claim no such monopoly. But we ask for the support of patriotic citizens only. We want no support from advocates of appeasement or from subversive elements.

"The people of New York state will elect a new administration to conduct the affairs of the state. No matter what issues arise affecting the state government, there can be only a singleness of purpose in our efforts to crush Hitler and his allies.

'In that effort every man and won is at the service of the country. We all have sacrifices to make, we all have a job to do, whether in uniform, in the factories and on the farms, in civilian activities relating to the war, or in the vital function of maintaining free government at home, "To the end that we may preserve our free institutions, we call upon all citizens of New York to join in a united effort to win the war and then take our rightful place in winning the peace.'

Predominantly patriotic, indeed, is this and appealing to all good citizens without suspicion of political selfishness or partisan rancor. The key of the whole thing is to be found in the phrase, "to the end that we may preserve our free institutions." That is why Republicans must wage a campaign this year, even though we are at war, and why they should strive to obtain representation of their large segment of the populace in the conduct of their government. It merely demonstrates the working of these free institutions, to obstruct which would be a grave misfortune as well as a funda-

Willing if They Can Be Convinced

A LETTER from a reader published elsewhere on this page today lodges objection to the opinion expressed by this newspaper that the request by Joseph B. Eastman, defense transportation director, for abandonment of all sorts of mass movements goes to a superfluous extreme by including the abandonment of county fairs. and especially the one held here each year

The contributor seems to think, erroneously, that the revenue phase is the sole basis for the objection, although, while that is germane and of considerable weight, it is to be noted that various other reasons why county fairs should be continued were advanced, these, together with the revenue angle, having been considered as outweighing the purpose of the Eastman request, which thus far is not a conclusive order but only a request. Is it, after all, fair to conclude that a county fair, even with racing, is a total loss in every respect. with no gains to anybody?

It can be said, however, that once the eople are convinced that suspension of fairs and all other gatherings are neces sary for the war program, they will accept the restriction willingly and without com plaint. The process of conviction, however, should have free sway in this instance, as well as in other instances, for the reason that in many of the bureaucratic decisions promulgated at Washington there has been a lamentable failure to take the people into confidence. As a result there has been unnecessary confusion and perplexity over some of the restrictions contemplated tions to the gasoline rationing program had there not been an avalanche of perplexing advance guesses and had there been more explicit explanation for it when it did come. There would equally have been fewer objections in the case of sugar rationing, about which protests are now being heard that this was put to an unnecessary extreme in consequence of which large surpluses of sugar supplies are reported to be piling up.

Another instance to be cited is the fiasco about razor blades, the only consequences of which was the prompting of purchases by expectant profiteers and the undue hoarding of them by users. The need for any such restriction apparently was quite unnecessary. The people are willing to undergo any acrifices and privations for the support of the war program. But they can hardly be blamed for indulging in questions when such sacrifices appear extreme and unnecessary in part. There must be an allout war effort, to be sure, but there must also be a strong supporting economy, undue impairment of which would harm rather than help that program.

One thing which makes the people entertain doubts about some of the restrictions contemplated or effected is the failure of official Washington to get government down to a war basis conformable to the diagrams and the prospectuses it has been drawing for civilians. The failure to cut down numerous nonessentials in government while every effort is being made to raise more and more money for the operation of government and the prosecution of the war leaves a certain doubt in the minds of the people that really drastic deprivations have as yet become absolutely necessary. When they are found to be such, however, the people can be expected to go along wholeheartedly. All they want to know is that they are not being taken on wild goose chases by an incomprehensively multiplied bureaucracy running riot.

The Days When Things Just Don't Click Right

EVERY ONE OF US occasionally experiences a day in which almost everything goes wrong. They fall into two categories the objective and the subjective. Of the two the latter is the most futile

When things go wrong, the causes are generally circumstantial rather than the perversity of the doer, although human blundering and carelessness have something to do with them. Often the cause results from undue haste. A sense of humor can here be effective.

But when things appear wrong, the cause is mental rather than physical. Expectations, hopes, aspirations run into a dim-out. There is a languid attitude of what's the use? Procrastination is, of course, the thief of time and one should not put off what one should do today. But when the mind becomes clogged or sour, when things just don't provide the usual spiritual impetus, fatigue is usually to

It is fatigue of the mind and rest is the proper remedy. One can here be excused for putting off. Then when the mind is refreshed by a salutary change of routine, of association, of scene and of activity, the work temporarily postponed can usually be cleared up in a jiffy. The mind can as well be overworked as the body.

Russia and Great Britain have entered into a twenty-year friendship treaty and have started to interpret it.

If this country should be forced to use gas on the Japs it won't be the laughing

The memory of man is short and many who fight today in the army and navy when the events of which the authors write were happening. The phrase "we won the last war and lost the peace" has been echoed and re-echoed just as "we fought a war to have the world for democracy, and we got fascism, communism, and another war" reflects the somewhat cynical approach of present day observers concerning the last conflic

But what are the facts? What happened at the last peace conference, why did the League of Nations fail, is it true that America contributed to that result and how, what really happened inside Germany, why didn't Germany stay disarmed and what are the lessons of experience that must be applied in the making of an armistice and a treaty when the present war ends?

Answered Courageously

These questions and a lot more are answered factually, dispassionately, courageously by the authors of the new book and it is gratifying to note that Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, in his Memorial Day address gave voice to some of the same thoughts that the Hoover-Gibson book expresses.

There isn't the slightest trace of domestic politics in the book and credit is given to the Roosevelt administration for its effort to assist in bringing about a reduction of armament and peace in pre-war

Well Informed

He was the American representative in disarmament conferences in the 20's and 30's and knows more about the inside of European politics than perhaps any other man

It is difficult to select quotations from the book-there are so many excerpts one could quote-and it would be unjust to attempt a summary of its carefully arranged contents. The book is well enough compiled to become a text-book in every college and school in the country and for every civic organization that wishes to study the problems of the peace so that American public opinion can start to prepare for discussion of peace

It would be a fine thing if Messrs. Hoover and Gibson could find their way clear to donate all royalties received from the book to the American Red Cross or some other relief organization so that not the slightest taint of commercial gain could be associated with promoting a wide circulation of the volume. For it is important that American public opinion know the facts about the last peace treaty and the postwar years lest careless and superficial statement build up a barrier to the acceptance of the terms

Another Fine Gesture

It would be a fine gesture if the Roosevelt administration could indicate to the people that the new volume was worth reading for historical background, at least, if not for the very constructive opinions contained therein. It is a book which proponents of super-government on the one hand as well as extreme isolationism, on the other, will not agree with and vet it is a book which suggests the starting points for a healing peace and a practicable method of enforcement.

Broadly speaking the book favors an international organization to enforce the peace and particularly that military force be maintained by the victors till reconstruction has been consummated after years perhaps of study by separate international commissions of all the peace in a log-rolling conference of a few months such as was held at Paris in 1919 is rejected as not sufficient for the needs of the fu-

Liberation, Also

Likewise attention is given to the need for liberating enemy peoples from the voke of dictatorship. There is, however, an appeal for representative government as the keystone to the arch of lasting peace and a philosophical discussion of hates, fears and revenge as a breeder of more war, economic nationalism and trade barriers—all of which have been dealt with in piece-meal fashion now and then by our public officials but which now are brought together as a truly American statement of what might be termed practical idealism.

The Hoover-Gibson book will help Europeans as well as Americans to educate themselves on the problems of peace that lie ahead-military, political, economic, financial and humanitarian.

Eastman Request Is Approved Reader Thinks Abandonment

of County Fairs a Wise Decision

Editor The Cumberland News: "Where your treasure is, there is your heart-

The editorial in the News of this date decrying the request of Joseph B. Eastman that all state and county fairs be deferred for the duration, is understandable; but it does not coincide with the policies of that paper in backing up the war effort in other respects.

Not being financially interested in the Cumberland Fair Association, nor in a business that is directly affected by the fair, we feel that we are in a better position to pass on the wisdom of the Eastman request. A business that finds it necessary taxes, should find some better reason for its existence. It is a well known fact that it takes six weeks out of each year for the business man and the wage earner of the Cumberland area to recoup financial losses sustained in the two long weeks of every short

Could this be the reason that the editorial mentioned used so much space to extoll the benefits to be derived from the fair, but never Box, 393, Cumberland, once mentioned "hoss racin"? No

By MARK SULLIVAN

It is a mistake for the public to make inference about Prime Minister Churchill's visit to President Roosevelt, and the subject of their discussion. Quite possibly, for good reason, the public may not be told with much certainty. Even the official statenents, when given ut, are practically certain to be complete. They nav even for an easily understand-Winston Churchill able reason, be something other than informative. The reason is that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt cannot inform their respective peoples without also informing Herr Hitler. And most certainly Herr Hitler is not going and Roosevelt decide.

In the restraint thus imposed upon officials, it is for commentators to interpret, so far as they can do so without harm. This the news and radio men have been doing with an amplitude which most certainly has a worthy virtue. The miscellaneousness of the reasons asigned for Mr. Churchill's visit is such that Herr Hitler can hardly be enlightened, and must more likely be confused, which is all to the good.

Decisions Necessary

In the judgment of this writer, based on no more than following recent developments in Washington. Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt are together because certain decisions must be made which can only be made by heads of state. It is not that these are sensational superdecisions; it is merely that they can only be made by heads. They are decisions which require subordinates to adjust and reconcile their respective interests to each

Our war effort so far, ours and and the public. Britain's combined, has been a preparedness effort-in the same sense that it has been preparing for the time when we could take the offensive. In the effort, there have been two groups. One group is the producers of materials, symbolized, in this country by the War Production Board under Mr. Donald Nelson. The other group is the army, navy. and air chiefs.

Each group has its own responsibility, and necessarily its own aims and ideals. The aim of the production group is to create an ideal mechanism for turning out enormous quantities of materials of all kinds. The aim of the military and naval group is to turn out an ideal fighting force. Each group, acting separately, would follow its ideal to the point of perfection. But the time has come when these two ideals must be merged into one, a unified and practical mechanuism considerable group, bourne-down to point to the revenue it returns into the depths of despondency by to the government in licenses and the burden of war, is going to be bouyed into stratospheric exultation by losing it's collective sock on a "hoss race"

The request of Eastman seems to be so much more sensible than many that we accept without question, that it should be granted without question, and he should be commended for his rare wisdom and common sense.

HERBERT A. DYE

for war-adapted to take the offensive at such time and on such front as may be decided, now or later. The decisions involved can only be made by the top superiors. The necessity for the conference of Mr Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill has been approaching for some time. Plans for it were made considerably before the recent British setback in North Africa-which is sometimes mistakenly assigned as the reason for the conference.

The Second Front

Another reason assigned for the conference is the so-called "second front." No doubt this figures in the conversations as something which may be near in time or may not; and which may take place in one quarter or another.

About a second front many statements have been made, some by highly placed persons in England and in America, some semi-authoritative But there has been only one indisputably official and formal statement. It is comparatively recent, made on June 11. It was made in the White House announcement at the conclusion of the conversations between President Roosevelt and Russian Foreign Minister Molotov. This statement, one sentence long, read:

"In the conversations, full understanding was reached with regard to the urgent need of creating a second front in Europe in 1942."

When that statement was given out the figures "1942" caught the eyes of radio and news men. Too alertly, perhaps, some of them gave out comment which created a public impression that a second front would be set up before the present year ends. But if the White House statement is re-read carefully, it will be found that no such impression is justified. The statement was indefinite; it had to be indefinite for reasons which illustrate a handicap besetting statesmen, newsmen

The statement had to be made

Several Audiences

in knowledge that it would have several audiences besides the American one, some of whom would react differently. One audience would be the Russian people, who would be cheered. Another would be the conquered peoples of Europe. Another would be Australia, who would know that if a second front were set up in Europe in 1942 it would be likely that an offensive in the Pacific would be postponed. Another audience would be Hitler. As to him, the objective must be not to inform but to confuse. If actually a second front were contemplated for 1942, it would be desirable not to let Hitler know. In the strategy of surprise; and the "psychological offensive" the "war of nerves." a device which Hitler himself has introduced into modern war, the objective is to make the enemy think whatever is not the fact.

As to the probable time of a second front in Europe, the principal determining factor at present is shipping. As to practically everything else, America is sufficiently prepared to send an expeditionary force which, united with the British, could set up a formidable second front. As to the shipping to carry such a force and maintain it in action, our production officials are confident that in a comparatively short time, we can increase our shipbuilding enormously. And our navy is confident the submarines can be checked.

Rommel Helped By Superior Gun, Paul Mallon Says

just outmaneuvered them. Inferior in overall fighting strength, he picked specific limited objectives. He searched for soft spots in the British line, then hammered these with concentrations of all he could muster.

The British tried to hold everywhere-Bir Achem, Acroma, Sidi Rezegh, after the Nazis had cut narrow lanes through their defensive mine fields. They divided their forces, placing the divisions at these and other key places.

Rommel went at these key points one by one. Following Napoleon's theory, he hit each point separately, each time mustering a superior force at that chosen spot.

Finally he split the British in half, one part remaining in Tobruk and the other seeking the natural protection of the Egyptian border.

Nazis Tougher

Official

The Nazi troops were tougher and better trained than the British, particularly better than the last British reinforcements from Egypt. Then, too, the British were confident that the intolerable summer heat would prevent any extensive Nazi operations, they did not throw their full strength into the battle as soon as the Germans did . *

Here again, as at Singapore, it was evident also that some Britishers still indulge themselves in the theory if not in the practice of time out for Scotch and sodas, siestas or cricket. The troops fought hard and thought they had Rommel trapped when they set him back from Bir Achem. Having air superiority, they bombed his thin supply lines running back in the lanes through the mine fields This should have won for them, but they encountered too much Rommel and too much weather. The crafty Nazi used every kind of vehicle which would haul water or gas, and his troops went for long stretches without water.

British soldiers, escaping from prison camps, said that they had gone 48 hours without water, and when they complained Rommel's officers asserted they had no water

planes. Good Technical Excuse

If you want a good technical excuse, you may find it in the German 88 millimeter anti-tank and antiaircraft gun. Most of the tanks in the fight were British. The relatively small number of our General Grants performed well according to all accounts.

But Rommel used his superior gun on self-propelled and towed mounts to devastating effect. That dual purpose gun has an extremely high muzzle velocity and is highly respected.

When Rommel retreated the first time he had concentrated them in narrow defiles in which he trapped many a British tank. For another thing, Rommel used his planes in close support of his tanks, while the British let the tanks go alone and used their planes mainly to bombs Rommel's supply lines (although this a choice most generals would have made.) Despite Rommel's victory, he has lost a lot of tanks and there is every reason to hope he cannot go into Egypt to break the grasp of the United Nations on the Middle East before fall-and things may be different for our side by fall. If he can find more soft spots, he might try to crash through, but the British are apparently not demoralized.

Eastern Front Gravest

Many a congressional authority put this Near East situation and the Russian difficulties at Sevastopol and Kharkov together with Winston

Churchill's visit to Mr. Roosevelt. A glance at the map will show you Hitler is attacking points farthest from American aid. Our supplies have been going into Russia at Murmansk, the northern tip of the trans-continental battle line, while Hitler is picking on the southern extremity. We are getting supplies into Egypt but mostly the long way around the Cape of Good Hope. This would be an ideal subject for a Roosevelt-Churchill conference, whereas the advertised matter of the "second front" is one that is more likely to be decided by American and British military leaders on the single point of when

THANKS

R thanks to the thousands of B & O patrons who are patriotically cooperating in helping to win the war!

The B & O is doing its utmost to meet the needs of civilian travel during this abnormal period and to maintain, as far as possible, its high standard of service.

BUT the transportation requirements of Uncle Sam and his armed forces must come first. There will consequently be times when the types of Pullman accommodations desired are not available or other inconveniences may arise which might never occur in normal times.

We ask your continued patience and understanding in this problem until the main job is done. We sincerely want to serve all to the limit of our ability. Here's how you can help us and yourself:

- * Plan your trips as far ahead as possible.
- * Make your arrangements for Pullman and Coach space
- * Cancel those arrangements promptly when your travel plans are changed.
- * Buy tickets in advance and avoid standing in line at station ticket windows.
- * Purchase round-trip tickets and save money.
- * If possible make your trips early in the week, to avoid peak rush over week-ends.

OUT-THINKING THINKERS

CERTAIN stratagems are never tried by fine players against average opponents, but are at-tempted only on advanced ones. Why is that? It would seem illogical, as the expert would off-hand be expected to see through a scheme to mislead him. The answer is that some of the dodges of the canny depend upon making an opponent go through a certain line of reasoning which would not be used by any but a very skillful cardsman.

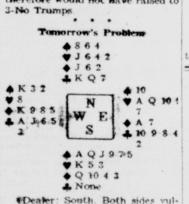

nerable.) Pass Pass Pass Pass The first moment he heard the bid, East thought of West's spade

call as a possible lead-director in case the opponents ultimately got into No Trumps. He was all ready to do it, until South made that bid of 2-No Trumps. Being a careful calculator, East decided that North's diamond rebid, after having bid No Trumps once, indicated he had a single stopper in the suit and so feared it.
When South, knowing about

North's apparent fear, then bid No Trumps himself, that sounded to East as if South was showing a second spade stopper. Hence, he reckoned. West must have pretty good stuff elsewhere in his hand, probably in the heart suit which South had bid. Consequently he led the heart 3 and the jig was up Winning that, North took two diamonds, gave up one to West, captured the spade return and then ran the balance of the needed nine tricks.

Most members of the rank and file could have been depended on to lead a spade after West showed the suit. That would have knocked out the A, and then, when a diamond had been lost, spades would have beaten the contract. Consequently, as South said later, he never would have made that 2-No Trumps call against anybody but thinking player, and North therefore would not have raised to Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

If North keeps quiet until West reaches 5-Clubs, and then do how should declarer play following a lead to the spade A and return of the diamond 3? Distributed by King Features Syndleate,

In Memoriam

I have lost my soul's companion, A life linked with my own; And day by day I miss him more, As I walk through life alone.

Sadly missed by wife, MRS. LOUISE BRITTEN.

You fought the pain so bravely, Your head you did not bend. We kept the watch with you, dear failer. Yes, even to the end. We watched and waited long in vain, God grant some day we'll meet again.
